Anaconda, a capital bidder, proposes to outdo itself in the first attempt. Butte, which never fails to have a glorious and patriotic Fourth, is in the ring as usual Missoula, too, is working hard, and its fair association will hang about $3,000 in premiums. Bozeman is getting there and Great Falls and Benton are at work. But Helena's festivities should eclipse them all. It should be the grandest event ever heard of in the Rocky mountains, and as Col. To travel 125 miles merely for the sake of killing a few trout would seem to all but the true disciple of "Isaac Walton" a very foolish method of spoiling a holiday. Nevertheless, the true sportsman welcomes sults are poor.

Then again the trip to Missoula over the Northern Pacific road is a very enjoyable performers are all clever actors. Alice Townsend, the La Porte sisters, the Shes-hans, the Metropolitan Emerson and Cook Hilton, the contortionist, are attractions. one. The scenery is fine, and I question whether any three men ever enjoyed a broiled steak any more than my companions and myself when on Friday evening last we sat down to a well served supper on one of the dining cars of the Northern Pacific road en route for Montana. The evening war better everted its attempt, warming up the cific road en route for Montana. The evening exerted its strength warming up the beautiful valley through which the railroad traverses, on one side of the car a boiling stream bounded and seethed over rocks and through tangled brush wood, while the densely wooded hills cast long shadows relieved here and there by the glint of the suns last rays as they seemed to bid good night to nature, and make room for that peaceful quiet which hushes the birds to sleep and acts as the lullaby to all insect life. Traveling in our days has been reduced to such a science that five hours on duced to such a science that five hours on the train passes very rapidly, and with pleas-ant travelling companions the day seems almost too short. While in the smokingalmost too short. While in the smoking-car it was our good fortune to meet a gen-tleman who, although for the last eighteen years a resident of Seattle, will be remem-bered by a great many of Helena's pioneers —Mr. A. H. Manning, once an active mem-ber of the vigilantes here and later on United States marshal. He is now a large real estate owner and dealer in Seattle, and when we met him was on his way back to when we met him was on his way back to when we met him was on his way back to ascertain what the devouring flames had left him to call his own. Although a man apparently past the prime of life, he still possesses the strength and will power which in former days won for him the respect of the rough crowd which acknowledged no laws and respected no justice save that administered by Judge Lynch, and many anecdotes, notably one in save that administered by Judge Lynce, and many anecdotes, notably one in which he came very near being hung by the vigilantes for saving the life of his cousin, who killed a man here in cold blood, would, if put together in book form, make a novel quite as exciting as the blood-curdling and yellow-backed literature purchased for a dime. What strikes everyone on reaching Missoula is the plentitude of what we most lack in Helena. Seymer park Sunday, on which occasion the Drum Lummon boys will meet their plentitude of what we most lack in Helena, namely, water and trees, while in the Florence they possess a hotel of which this city might well be proud. Our advent in Missoula, armed with baskets, poles and fishing enthusiasm, was met with the usual variety of enthusiasm, was met with the usual variety of enthusiasm so admirably adapted to confuse and make one question whether the sport to be obtained in the selected fishing ground is worth the journey.

Of course every man speaks from his own experience, and consequently my advice to all fellowmen is this: Listen to all, but use your own judgment and be guided entirely by practical results. There are streams around Missoula both good, bad C. M. Williams, who was charged by streams around Missoula both good, bad and indifferent, and there are trout to be caught in almost every direction, but to get for the bereaved relatives. One great charm about this road is the very accommodating manner in which the conductors and engineers will take up or put down devotees of the pisca-torial art. But nevertheless in view of the fact that if the tired sportsman misses the evening train back to town he is compelled to wait over until the following evening, ich courtesy is, to say the least, well imed.

The "London" is a fine stream and our hrst day's experience resulted in a catch of about twenty pounds of fair sized speckled beauties, but while this take for three rods was small, the experience obtained justified the wasted energy. In the first place at this time of the year the big fish are mission, and examined candidates for positions in the railway mail service. Our second day's fishing took us in the direction of Rock creek, where, thanks to the courtesy of the conductor, the morning train slacked up sufficiently to allow us to ump off at the site of the old saw mill just hree miles west of Bonita. Here we were introduced to an old hunter and trapper named George Kennedy, whose hospitality and sportsmanlike spirit afforded us a glimpse of what natural no-bility may be disguised under a rough cost and uncouth style.

"Rock creek" is no misnomer, for the rocks abound there and the people bottom rocks abound there and the pebbly bottom is a treacherous foundation for a pair of rubber soles, as I discovered more than once. A wetting, however, by no means dampens a fisherman's appetite for sport, and a pocket flask and hot sun very rapidly cause one to forget such a trifling misadventure especially when one is rewarded. venture, especially when one is rewarded by a two-pounder, safely landed, after a twenty minute struggle between an old built rout and a seven ounce rod. A mid-day lunch with Mr. Kennedy, in which everything in his well-filled larder was placed at our disposal, was also enlivened with tales of Indians and bears. It must be said that a man is apt to lose that sympathy for the noble red man devas-tated of his lands and compelled to live on a reservation, when one learns that upon such small provocation as the Fourth of July he will emulate the example of his white brethren, get fiendishly drunk, rob and even murder, simply with the view of having a good time.

And as Mr. Kennedy said, with a meaning smile, as he touched his Winchester rifle, "The best method of keeping such varmints in check is to have a shooting iron handy and not wait for a requisition to use it?"

Our first day's experience on the Lou Lou convinced us that a good day's sport could be obtained again on this stream, but unfortunately we listened to the voice of the charmer in the person of a man who has the reputation being a great local fish-erman in Missoula, and whose reputation as a fisherman is deserved, if one may judge by the absence of veracity in his fish

The postmaster at "London" proved himself a good Samaritan, and for a consideration gave us a supper consisting of our own trout, some bacon and fresh strawberries, while for accommodation he deposited the tenor in the postoffice where only the mail ever reposed, and offered myself and "Cadeaux" in disguise a covered wagon in the farm yard. We however found a good bed in a neighboring farm house, and after listening to tales of mountain lions, bears, and their overweening dislike for solitary fishermen, we turned in, only to be turned out at 5:30 a. m., when we found a wagon in readiness to take us up stream far from the haunts of man.

Reaching a point about ten miles up stream, we got off the wagon half a mile apart and proceeded to fish down stream. If the lower part of the London and Rock creek had seemed wild, they paled into insignificance in comparison with the upper stream. Here the thickly wooded hills rise abruptly up on either side of the rocky bed, and beyond the noise of the boiling stream silence seemed to rise supreme. stream silence seemed to rise supreme.

I must confess that until 1 got down to work the bear stories crowded into my brain and ousted every other idea, and even the blackened stumps of old burnt trees assumed shapes that a fertile imagination might have converted into anything. The assumed shapes that a fertile imagination might have converted into anything. The fishing, however, proved too good to permit Mr. Bruin's image to remain very long imprinted on my memory, and after catchone old two-pounder and two or three very little under a pound and a haif, a feat in which both my companions succeeded in also doing, besides getting a host of smaller fry, we reached the wagon safely, and caught the train to Missoula the same evening.
